USPA NEWS - The acting President of the Spanish Government, Mariano Rajoy, will offer Friday to Socialist candidate for Prime Minister, Pedro Sanchez, five agreements on growth and employment; fiscal and financial reform; social policy; education and institutional strengthening.

The five agreements were explained on Thursday to the president of the centrist Citizens, Albert Rivera, during the meeting the two leaders held in Parliament. It is a document with five major Covenants of State to form a stable Government for four years led by the largest party in the last general elections. The five agreements are, first, the relative growth and employment, ensuring the consolidation of the economic recovery and meeting the path of budgetary stability agreed with the EU, although making use of the flexibility offered by the EU, as it has done on other occasions not only in Spain but in other European countries.

Second, would the Pact for Fiscal Reform and the regional financing; thirdly, the Conservative leader referred to the Social Pact to reach agreements that would serve to strengthen the pillars of the welfare state policies. Rajoy closed five major proposed agreements pointing to a Pact for Education and one for institutional strengthening, including a commitment to defend Spain's unity and national sovereignty.

During his appearance before the press, Mariano Rajoy explained that the five major covenants "make a moderate agenda that can match the vast majority of the Spanish people" and considered that "it would be best for Spain". This, he said, "is a living document, to agree, and a lot of sense, and it would be very well regarded in Europe." According to the president of the Popular Party, the first of the agreements would be for economic growth and jobs "to consolidate the economic recovery and it reaches all citizens."

To do this, he said that "Spain has to fulfill the path of budgetary stability, but also can make use of the flexibility offered by the European Union." For the acting President of the Spanish Government, "an executive between PSOE, Podemos and independence, would be a radical Government and would have many difficulties within the European Union." In this regard, Mariano Rajoy recalled that the risk premium in Portugal, a country governed by the Socialists, is now at about 470, and Spain has risen to 150.
